

Giving Thanks to God

The Story of Thanksgiving

September 6, 1620: the Mayflower sailed from Plymouth, England, with 102 passengers.

November 11, 1620: the men signed the Mayflower Compact in Cape Cod Bay. It begins, "In the name of God, Amen."

The first winter at Plymouth was hard. About half the people on the Mayflower died of sickness.

In the spring of 1621, Tisquantum showed the colonists how to plant corn.

On March 22, 1621, Ousamequin (Massasoit) and Governor John Carver made a peace agreement.

In the fall of 1621, the colonists gathered a good harvest of Indian corn.
Give thanks to the LORD, for He is good. — Psalm 136:1 (BSB)

In the fall of 1621, Massasoit and about ninety Wampanoag men joined the colonists for a three-day harvest feast.

In the summer of 1623, after a drought, Plymouth kept a day of thanksgiving and prayer.

Give thanks to the LORD, for He is good; His loving devotion endures forever. — Psalm 107:1 (BSB)

On October 3, 1789, President George Washington proclaimed a day of public thanksgiving.

He assigned "Thursday the 26th day of November next."

On October 3, 1863, President Abraham Lincoln proclaimed a national day of Thanksgiving.

He called it "a day of Thanksgiving and Praise."

A family gives thanks to God for home, food, and freedom.
Give thanks in every circumstance, for this is God's will for you in Christ Jesus. — 1
Thessalonians 5:18 (BSB)

What I'm Thankful For

How to use this book

Print on US Letter paper at actual size (100%). Color the open shapes with crayons or markers. Read the short line on each page together, then talk about the story.

A little context

In September 1620 the Mayflower sailed from Plymouth, England, with 102 passengers. On November 11, 1620, the men signed the Mayflower Compact in Cape Cod Bay. It begins, "In the name of God, Amen."

The first winter at Plymouth was hard. About half the people on the Mayflower died of sickness.

In the spring of 1621, Tisquantum, a Patuxet man, showed the colonists how to plant corn. On March 22, 1621, Ousamequin (Massasoit) and Governor John Carver made a peace agreement.

That fall they gathered a corn harvest. Massasoit and about ninety Wampanoag men joined a three-day feast. In the summer of 1623, after a drought, Plymouth kept a day of thanksgiving and prayer.

On October 3, 1789, President George Washington proclaimed a day of public thanksgiving. On October 3, 1863, President Abraham Lincoln proclaimed a national day of Thanksgiving.

Families still thank God for home, food, and freedom. The verse lines in this book are Berean Standard Bible text.

- What can we thank God for today?

About the pictures

English clothes in the 1620 scenes are everyday dress from that time. Hats are soft caps, not tall hats with buckles. Wampanoag clothes are deerskin mantles, leggings, and moccasins. Tisquantum and Massasoit are shown as friends and teachers.
